Mission Statement

The Humanities Scholars Program enables undergraduate humanities scholars to become independent thinkers who examine cultural products and practices from a multitude of perspectives. The program provides educational opportunities and strong support for learning, research, and civic engagement to talented young scholars who, over time, have an impact on the intellectual atmosphere of the campus and will make significant contributions to society through the humanities.

Welcome Class of 2021!

A Note From The Director

In fall 2013, the Class of 2017 and I started in the Humanities Scholars Program together. In these four years, I have witnessed the full cycle of their professional and academic journey, from the time they arrived to UMBC to their graduation this past May. It is indeed fascinating to see the growth of all the humanities scholars, who do not hesitate to expand their learning opportunities by extending their study abroad semester to a year; who engage in research at UMBC or abroad; who from their first year participate in international archeological digs or apply for international internships; who lead workshops for fellow humanities scholars in our Professional Series; and who are participants in the UMBC community and make our campus thrive. No wonder I enjoy writing the recommendation letters for Fulbright applications and graduate schools for rising seniors! And as the humanities scholars enter the ranks of alumni, I look forward to learning about their new endeavors either in graduate school or on their new jobs. I will be on sabbatical this fall conducting research in Spain, and as good as it sounds, be sure I will miss the Humanities Scholars Program Alumni reception on October 14. Professor Tim Phin, who will be the Acting Director, will welcome all of you. I look forward to seeing all of you on my return. – Dr. Ana Oskoz
Eva Janotta graduated in 2012 with majors in Gender + Women's Studies and English, and a minor in Spanish.

What activities were you involved in while at UMBC?
I was a member of Women Involved in Learning and Leadership, also known as WILL, for all four years. During my last year I was a member of the English Honors Thesis group and the Gender and Women's Studies Planning Committee. I loved seeing how a program was organized from the inside. I also joined Baltimore Racial Justice Action in my junior year, where I learned about how white supremacy works in our contemporary world. Lastly, I took swing dancing lessons at Mobtown Ballroom in Baltimore. They were So. Much. Fun. I dance to this day!

What were some highlights of your time in the Humanities Scholars Program?
I LOVED all the field trips we were invited to take to the theater and other cultural outings. Study abroad (I went to Lima, Peru) was also a highlight, not just of Humanities Scholars Program, but of my life.

How did the Humanities Scholars Program shape you professionally? What skills, knowledge and experiences have your brought to your professional/academic life?
Through the Humanities Scholars Program I improved my critical thinking skills and my writing/communication skills. The community also taught me that there are so many people who want you to succeed. They want to help, and they're willing to give their time and energy to you.

How would you define the Humanities Scholars Program in five words?

What are you doing since you graduated?
After I graduated, I worked full time as an Executive Assistant, then I became the Communications Coordinator at MOM's Organic Market (a local grocery chain). For the first two years I lived at home with my parents to save money. In 2015 I left my full time job and started my own social media and marketing company, called Simply Put Strategies (my dad named it!). While I built the business, I worked part time at the local grocery store. As of early 2017, my business is full time!!!!

What do you have planned for the future?
This fall I'm embarking on a new adventure and moving to Phoenix, AZ with my partner, Steve (I met him at UMBC, but he didn't have the good fortune of being an HSP student). A few months ago I started going "zero waste," meaning I'm trying to reduce the waste I consume by buying groceries in bulk and avoiding plastic packaging like the plague. I also plan to expand my business.
Program Highlights

Research and Publications
Once again, the scholars took their research beyond their courses at UMBC. Junior Julian Tash (History and Asian Studies) was accepted as a delegate to the 68th Japan-America Student Conference and was selected as the American delegate to give a speech at the Consulate-General's private residence in San Francisco. Alumni Melina Latona (Global Studies) and Jennifer Wachtel (History) published their works, “Changing the Nature of Education in the Valleys of Bolivia” and “An Unlikely Refuge: Jewish Refugees from Nazi Europe in Shanghai, 1933-1945,” respectively, in the UMBC Undergraduate Review. Junior Emily Grace (English) published her poem, “The Florist on Fenwick Street,” in Bartleby. Emily also conducted an interview with WMBC about poetry and her writing process with an editor from Bartleby.

Humanities Scholars Program Salon
This year, the program held the third Humanities Scholars Salon in April 2017, two weeks before URCA D. At the Salon, which also served as a rehearsal venue for URCA D, scholars Flora Kirk (Ancient Studies), Elena Beck (MCS), and Dylan Elliott (History) received feedback to fine-tune their presentations.

The Salon also featured juniors Emily Grace, Kelly Wan (Global Studies), and Mary Farrell (MLLI) discussing their time abroad and offering advice to students preparing to go abroad.

Professional Series Workshops
As in the past, we conducted the Professional Series Workshops to help prepare humanities scholars for their future endeavors. Humanities scholars participated in the Public Speaking and Professional Attire Workshop, provided by Junior scholars Rebecca Haddaway (English and Global Studies) and Carrie Cook (English), in which first- and second-year scholars practiced 30-second elevator speeches and learned how to dress for professional events. This information was put into practice at the Scholars Selection Day! After the Resume Writing Workshop, provided by Dylan Elliott, scholars revised and submitted their resume to Career Services for final approval. With their new approved resumes, scholars applied for and obtained summer internships. In the Humanities Applied to Service Workshop, Shriver Center Assistant Director Lori Hardesty and junior Morgan Zepp (English and Global Studies) presented different volunteer and service learning opportunities. First- and second-year scholars commented that the workshops encouraged them to search for opportunities.
Study Abroad Salon

This year humanities scholars studied in China, Costa Rica, Estonia, France, Germany, Japan, Switzerland, and the United Kingdom. The emphasis that the program places on the benefits of study abroad is well noticed by the scholars who search for even additional opportunities to study and research abroad. First-year humanities scholar Rachel Szpara (MLLI and Asian Studies), for instance, was awarded a Huayu Enrichment Scholarship to study at the National Taiwan Normal University in Taipei this summer. Junior Flora Kirk and freshman Jonathan Harness (Ancient Studies and History) were selected to participate in archeological excavations in Bulgaria and Jordan, respectively. Scholars search for study abroad opportunities that allow them to continue their studies, explore new possibilities, and enhance their intercultural competency.

First Year Seminars

How do children and their nation interact? How does the nation utilize children as symbols or actors for political ends? In the fall 2016 humanities seminar, guided by professors Erin Hogan (MLLI) and Tim Phin (Ancient Studies), scholars examined these central questions within Western Culture, by investigating literary, legal, visual, filmic, and critical texts. UMBC President Freeman Hrabowski joined them to talk about his participation in the Children’s March in Birmingham, providing scholars with an example of children’s political convictions and agency.

In their spring 2017 humanities seminar, “Reorienting Culture,” scholars engaged in an expansive repertoire of transnational popular, literary, material, and visual artifacts. With professors Tamara Bhalla (AMST) and Fan Yang (MCS), scholars explored how Asia, in both its local and global incarnations, reorient the way we think about culture.
Internships, Service, and Work

Humanities Scholars participate in internships, service work, and hold on- and off-campus jobs. For example, junior Ahana Kowdley (MLLI and Political Science), accepted an internship with the Humane League Grassroots for Baltimore VegFest as Webmaster, and first-year scholar Julia Byrne (History and Political Science) is currently an intern for Maryland State Senator Roger Manno.

Like in previous years, humanities scholars serve at UMBC and beyond. Second-year scholar Mairead Alexander (English Literature and Music) is involved with Little Friends for Peace, a non-profit organization that teaches children nonviolent strategies through cooperative activities. Sage Burch (Global Studies and Asian Studies), a junior, volunteered at Relay Elementary School in Halethorpe, MD as a student mentor. Second-year scholar Colin Hrenko (MLLI) participated in the Reading Partners at Lakeland Elementary Middle School, where he tutored elementary school students in reading and writing.

Humanities scholars also take on many leadership roles. Anthony Alberti (English) was the Communications Director at QUMBC, a queer activist group on campus, and Rebecca Haddaway served as the environmental section’s fundraising chair. Senior Dylan Elliott was the Humanities, Arts, and Social Sciences Sciences editor for the UMBC Undergraduate Review, and Anthony Alberti, Alex Armbruster (Global Studies), and Nani Wachhaus (English and Ancient Studies) served as Bartleby staff.

In addition, humanities scholars pursue many employment opportunities. At UMBC, junior Meg Gomyo (MCS) is a tour guide and social media ambassador in the UMBC Office of Undergraduate Admissions and Orientation. First-year scholar Lindsey Green (History) works as an Orientation Peer Advisor, facilitating positive orientation experiences for incoming students, and Chelsea Johnson (MLLI and Asian Studies) is a gallery attendant at the Center for Art Design and Visual Culture (CADVC). Colin Hrenko was a Research Assistant for Dr. Erin Hogan, researching the precedent of Spanish-language filmmakers in the United States. Senior Mary Farrell is the Student Assistant for the Language, Literacy, and Culture (LLC) Ph.D. Program. Beyond UMBC, sophomore Nani Wachhaus is a script writer for Underbyte Studios, where she writes the accompanying text for a “choose-your-own-adventure style” iPhone game.

Humanities Scholars Highlights

For the third consecutive year, first-year Humanities Scholars created puzzle pieces representing themselves to hang on the Humanities Scholars wall.

First-year humanities scholars invited their high school teachers for the annual Exemplary Teachers’ Day to celebrate and recognize their dedication to their work and students.

The Humanities Scholars Program Alumni Reception celebrated UMBC’s 50th anniversary, and was a great opportunity for alumni to catch up with fellow alums and with past program directors.

At the annual Humanities Scholars Reception, humanities scholars interacted with and learned from UMBC faculty members and Dean Scott Casper.

And the Humanities Scholars Program has its own graduation cords!
